RESULT WAS FATAL.

Sunday Sport on Spy Pond, Arlington, Ends in Death of Eddie Donahue-Was Struck by Horse and Sustained a Concussion of the Brain.

Eddie Donahue, aged 14 years, was fatally injured on Spy pond in Arlington Sunday afternoon, at the close of a day's sport among the horsemen from Arlington and vicinity. The young lad was watching the speeders and the skaters, and had been on the ice during most of the afternoon. He was in the midst of a large crowd and attention was suddenly called to a string of flyers coming down the pond at a rapid pace. Whether it could be called a race or not is a point of dispute, but at all events, five horses were closely bunched, with Chester Peck, of Arlington, driving the leader. The crowd surged forward near the end of the course and the with Chester Peck, of Arlington, driving the leader. The crowd surged forward near the end of the course and the young fellow was in front of the others. Whether he realized his position is not known and never will be, but the horse driven by Peck struck him in the breast and threw him heavily to the ice. He struck on the side of his head near the right temple, and when he fell he did not move. He was picked up unconscious, and was soon removed to the house of Wendell Richardson, of Pleasant street, which was but a few rods away. Here he was attended by Dr. Edward D. Hooker and Dr. Edwin P. Stickney, but consciousness did not return. Later he was removed to his home at 39 North Union street, and the next day was taken to the Massachusetts General hospital, where he died Tuesday morning. He did not regain consciousness.

There is more or less dispute whether there was really a race in progress when the accident happened, but at all events there had been brushes during the afternoon, and a large crowd had congregated to see the sport. In the bunch of horses at this time it is not definitely known whether or not there were other Arlington horses, but there were some from out of town. Soon after the accident, Chester Peck, the driver of the horse which struck the boy, was interviewed by an Enterprise reporter. Mr. Peck said he did not see the lad until just as the collision came, and although he tried to check the steed, it came too late. He was exceedingly anxious about the affair, and directed that the boy be given the best of care, for while he disclaimed any blame in the matter, he felt his situation and that of the young victim very keenly.

The boy lived with Arthur Coughlin, of North Union street, and was employed by him, having come to Arlington about a year ago from a children's home in Boston. At the Coughlin home, Dr. Hooker attended the case, but as there were no signs of improvement Monday morning directed that the boy be taken to the hospital. The doctor was unable to find any fracture or compression injured until he died there were no signs of returning consciousness.

From the people who were witnesses of the accident, it has been somewhat difficult to secure stories which agreed as to details, partly because the excitement tended to obscure them, and partly because for fear of notoriety for themselves and friends. It is true, however, beyond doubt, that the young victim stepped or was crowded by those in the rear on to the course and that he was not seen by the horsemen until the moment of collision. Whether there was negligence displayed or not may be further considered, and an investigation of the affair is not unlikely.

Miss G. S. Hoogs, of 30 Tremont street, Boston, visiting agent of the Children's Institution department, who has had a general oversight of the Donahue boy, was in Arlington Tuesday, in an endeavor to learn the particulars of the affair.

"WHY IS IT?"

Editor Enterprise: I was much impressed in reading your article headed as above, in your last edition. Doubtless, some of the Sunday laws enforced in the first half of the 19th century—for instance, one authorizing an officer of the law to arrest any person driving quietly on the public highway, during certain hours of Sunday—were altogether too strict, but it does seem to me we have swung to the other extreme, in this beginning of the 20th century. Now, horse racing on one of our principal streets. Sunday afternoons, is not only allowed, but is participated in by some of our most prominent citizens, thus endangering the lives of any who may be quietly passing along the street. We often hear, when the crowds are seen on our streets and in the fields, on Sundays, "They have to work six days in the week and should have some recreation," but how about the owners of fast horses, do they have no recreation during the week? We know there are many respectable citizens who engage in various kinds of sports on Sunday afternoons, but we believe most of them would desist if they would stop and think what the influence of their example is, especially upon young people. In view of the fatal accident which occurred on Spy pond last Sunday afternoon, isn't it just possible that Arlington should "stop and think"? It seems to me, the question of Sunday observance should engage the best thought of all good citizens, and I am very glad to find the Enterprise on the right side, and thinking.

The Violet Whist club held its last meeting at the home of the Misses Bresnan, Brighton street, on Friday evening, Feb. 7. Whist was played until 9 o'clock. The first prize was won by Miss Theresa Grady, and the consolation prize by Miss Clara Leonard. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of whist, and games and music were enjoyed. Readings were given by Miss Grady and Miss Leonard in a most delightful manner. Piano selections were finely rendered by Katherine Shean, Annie Carey, Annie Reed, and a duet 'w Goldie and May Bresnan. Vocal solos by Jeannette Maguire and Katherine Newman, and a vocal trio by mary Reed, Edith Cashman and Julia Maguire was one of the most pleasing numbers. Inere was singing of coon songs by the entire club.

Lorenzo D. Cochrane for one year. Of the several candidates a week ago, many have withdrawn, and their support will go to these two candidates. Both men are well and favorably known, and Mr. Cochrane is now filling an unexpired term at the present time. Dr. Piper is regarded as one of the most favorable candidates the town could secure.

Dr. Piper, during his five years' residence in Lexington, has always taken an active interest in town affairs. He is well equipped for the position, educated in the public schools of Peterboro, N. H. Cushing academy at Ashburnham. Mass., and the medical department of Boston university, where he graduated in 1890, since which time he has been in the active practice of his profession. He is a thorough, hard-working student, progressive and painstaking in whatever he undertakes, and nothing committed to his care will suffer from lack of attention and interest.

He has already shown his interest in the schools, having voluntarily delivered a course in the high school on physiology and hygiene, which proved highly interesting and instructive.

He has been an enthusiastic member of the Lexington Historical society from the time of his coming to town, and has rendered valuable service in the work of the society.

Dr. Piper favors an increase of the number of the school committee and the election of women as members of the committee. For the seven years prior to his coming to Lexington, he was in practice at Hillsboro, N. H., and while there he served as a member of the school board. Dr. Piper is well qualified for the position, and although he does not seek it, there is no doubt that if elected he will cheerfully devote to it the several candidates a week ago, many

He therefore inaugurated an encompassing inquiry on his contemporaries, and in He therefore inaugurated an encompassing inquiry on his contemporaries, and in less than twenty years it has led to the publication of 23 volumes. He commenced with a study of Parisian society, of the world of misery and crime ("L'Enfer Parisien," "Les Saltimbanques," "Le Chemin du Crime," "Les Larrons"). Then, ascending one by one all the various rounds of the social ladder ("Les Mondains," "L'Amour Infirme," "Gladys," "Tout pour l'Honneur"), he entered into the intimacy of kings, of most of the sovereigns of Europe. He frequented the masters of contemporaneous thought Rean, Maupassant; interviewed the Russian literateurs in their homes ("La Russian literateurs in their homes ("La Russian literateurs)." sian literateurs in their homes ("La Russie Souterraine," "L'Attentat Sloughine") and Ibsen in his fogs ("Notes sur la Norvege"). The subject of the lecture was "Le roman contemporain, est-il une pienture aciz de la societe Francaise?" After expressing his appreciation of the work done for the French language in America by Harvard men, M. Le Roux said that no true insight into French life could be had through what is termed the French novel, What the average foreigner knows of Paris, for instance, is so, ely the boulevards, the theatres, and the museums, while the home life the bourgeois life, remains a closed book. nished the fund which brings an emi-from the somewhat antiquated formulae of life on which they are gradually fall-ing asleep, he preached expatriation ("Nos Fils," "Nos Filles"), the exodus ("Nos Filis," "Nos Filies"), the exodus to the new countries where man lives a larger and freer life. To set an example, he took his own family away to Algeria ("Je deviens Colon"). He worked on a farm, and gave new life to the native carpet industry. His unwearied curiosity next fastened to the Mussulmanish societies. In a raid which is remained famous, he crossed the Sahara from end to end as a dromedary courier, in summer and without a tent. He wrote on the sects and on Arab life two books which have had the most resounding success the bourgeois life, remains a closed book.

M. Le Roux was tendered a reception in the rooms of the Harvard Circie Francaise, in Gray's hall. Wednesday night. He was given a gole meal such as is presented each year to the lecturer of the circle.

M. Hugues Le Roux was born at Harve, Nov. 23, 1860, of an old Norman family of ship owners. He has, himself, in a book which is the chronicle of his youth ("O mon passe" told the relations that his family had, regularly for above a century, with the United States. By his mother's side he was related to General Gourgaud, who accompanied Napoleon to St. Helena, and Gourgaud-Dugazon, the actor who flourished toward the end of the eighteenth century and was so conspicuous in the literary history of his time. Hence, drubless, the double heredity so curiously wrought in M. Hugues Le Roux, which has made of him not only a man of letters but a man of action, a writer and an explorer. In his childhood M. Hugues Le Roux had known Flaubert, who was an intimate acquaintance of his family. At 18, while finishing his studies for the licentiate degree of philosophy, ruin having befallen his family, he was plunged into the struggle for existence and became secretary to Alphonse Daudet. He married at 23, full of confidence in his own energy.

BERTRAM HALL, RADCLIFFE COLL EGE-A. W. Longfellow, Jr., Architect.

At the Lincoin's day observances of the Women's Educational and Industrial union, of Boston, last week Wednesday, Col. Thos. wentworth Higginson gave a most scholarly and interesting estimate of the results and features of Lincoln's life. From the many good things he said we quote:

"I shall always associate President Lincoln, not with any personal intercourse, for I never saw him; but I shall always associate him with his greatest work, the proclamation of emancipation, and that with the scene where I heard it read with an accompaniment so impressive that I never can forget it. In South Carolina, under Gen. Saxton. impressive that I never can forget it. In South Carolina, under Gen, Saxton, vart multitudes of freedmen, as they were then called, had been collected upon the Sea islands. They had been organized into platoons and a regiment of soldiers formed from the able-bodred men. And the very day, Jan. 1, 1863, when the proclamation was to take effect, a great barbecue was to be held near my camp, for I commanded the regiment, and the proclamation of emanipation was to be read to those people. The meaning of a barbecue was that I was awakened in the morning by my orderly, who came with a mesage from somebody to inquire how many oxen I would have roasted for dinner. My previous experiences in life had been order-

It was read most impres-sively by William Brisbane, a former slaveholder of those islands, who had set sively by William Brisbane, a former slaveholder of those islands, who had set his slaves at liberty before the war. He read it amid breathless attention, and after he had read it I was going to make some remarks. There was a moment's pause while I went up the platform, and suddenly a cracked voice of an old negro began to sing 'My Country 'Tis of Thee.' Two other old negroes joined in with their cracked voices, and presently those thousands of slaves were singing it, making my poor words insignificant and superfluous. What became of my little speech afterward I do not know. I hope it was never given, but when I think of Lincoln, I shall think of that throng of enthusiastic human belings, not one of whom had ever had a country before, and shall ask myself what other American ever had a song to commemorate him so noble as that song was."

George E. McNeill Is a Many-Sided Man.

(From the Sunday Globe.)

There is a side to the activity of Geo.

E. McNeill, the distinguished Boston trades' union advocate, which is unknown even to some of his acquaintances and associates, while by most of ances and associates, while by most or his admirers it is not suspected. This is that Mr. McNeill is a lover of the art of literature and has produced a con-siderable number of works outside what art of literature and has produced a considerable number of works outside what he calls his "sermons." Among them are not only novels and plays, but many poems, some of them in rhyme.

At his home on Rindge avenue, North Cambridge, one evening this week, Mr. McNeill was found enjoying a game of cards with a member of his family—the recreation with which he commonly prepares his mind for writing—and goodnaturedly tore himself away from the table to repair to the library upstairs and dig for a few moments among the mass of material there in quest of fair illustrations of his work.

The first surprise he had in store was the character of his favorite reading. Instead of dry reports, volumes of labor statistics and books on the social problem, his shelves held sets of Dickens, Hugo, and Mark Twain. And the second surprise was akin to this. When the manuscripts and clippings began to appear from box and portfolio it became evident that the search in this place for "a poet of the toilers" was to be disappointed. The subjects of the various compositions had almost nothing to do with labor problems.

"No," said he, when pressed to find appointed. The subjects of the various compositions had almost nothing to do with labor problems.

"No." said he, when pressed to find something bearing on those subjects, "when I have anything on my mind along that line I put it into prose argument, where it will be more likely to accomplish a definite result for which I am fighting. Reform is serious business. Then, when I feel like undertaking for my pleasure a piece of literature, I get as far as possible away from the subject of labor. It is only in the novel, "The Slave of Fortune that I have departed from this practice."

Mr. McNeill's first piece of writing was done when he was under 20 years of age. He was at the time a waiter in a restaurant in State street, which was much frequented by bank employees. At odd times in the restaurant he would write passages of his story, which was called "Mabel Richardson," and told romantically of John Brown's experiences in Kansas. Some of the pages were written on the backs of bills of fare. After the noon rush was over and an opportunity came for his own luncheon, he would take it deliberately at one of the tables and write as he ate.

"You're always writing," said a bank cashier, one day, "What are you writing?"

"O, it's nonsense," said the youth, "a ing?"

"O, it's nonsense," said the youth, "a The cashier asked to see it when it was done, and read it. He expressed the opinion that it needed to be gone over carefully and put into shape by somebody, and he thought it would cost about $50, which he was willing to pay. The young author said that he would first take the book home and go over it himself. This he did, with the result that his mother found it, chiled him for "wasting his time writing such him for "wasting his time writing such result that ms mother found it, chief him for "wasting his time writing such silly stuff," and burned the manuscript. The son never restored it.

"The Slave of Fortune," another novel, had better luck. It was published in 1890-SI, in the Paterson (N. J.) Home Journal, of which the author was the editor, and also in his friend, Frank K. Foster's Haverhill Laborer. It told about a rich young girl who fell in love with one of her father's mechanics. The father turned her away, and she went to work in a New England factory. The "squatter sovereignty" incidents of upper Manhattan were used in the story.

The plays written by Mr. McNeill are three, and one, done throughout in blank verse, is called "A Scotch Tragedy," It is 30 years old, and has neverben acted, though it has been read in public. "If a manuscript is not taken at once," he says. "I usually put it away." It was so in this case. The editor of the Globe many years ago, took the play, obtained an expert opinion, and advised the author to submit it to Mr. Field of the Boston Museum. This was done, but Mr. McNeill thinks the play never reached a reading by the manager. Its principal character is a sort of modern Lady Macbeth. Of insatiable ambition socially, she had stifled all conscience, and plotted to have those who stood in her path put away by murder. A young man engaged to marry the young woman was more than the purposes of her adversaries.

Another play. "The New Cure," was a comic piece. In it a father becomes disturbed about his son's moroseness and apparent aversion to society. Consulting by letter an eminent physician, he was advised to send the young man for temporary residence with the doctor. This he did. The young man was not so morose as his father thought he was, and under the cheering influence of the physician's pretty daughter was soon cured altogether.

The third play of Mr. McNeill's is in rhyme, and is practically a comic opera, and is entitled "The Landing of the Pagist back after the Judians. Then the littlains land and drive the Iri

Wakens the poor man's frown;
Here where no sceptre's sway

It is not that Mr. McNeill cannot throb in poetry for the sorrow of the toilers if he chooses, and sometimes he chooses. At Christmas time in 1900, he sent his triends a card bearing a Christmas toem. The first stanza was this:

Through swamps of sin and over rocks of pride.
To humble mangers where the poor housed.

our souls exultantly would sound The Christmas song of peace, good will

The next literary work to be undertaken by Mr. McNeill is the revision and bringing up to date of his book, "The Labor Movement—the Problem of Today," published about 15 years ago. When that is done he may begin an autobiography. Meantime his miscellaneous writings, which he has never even cut out and pasted into a scrapbook, are to be collected and indexed, with a view to their being published also.

AT THE ANIMAL ARENA.

AT THE ANIMAL ARENA.

Esau, the ape-man at Bostock's Animal arena in the Cyclorama building on Tremont street, Boston, has proved one of the most interesting attractions there. The performances every morning, afternoon and evening are thronged with spectators. Owing to the extremely delicate constitution of the ape-man, the greatest care has to be taken to protect him from draughts. During last week he suffered from a slight cold, and to cure him he was given some sweet concoction. Esau liked the taste of the cough syrup, and insisted upon having more after he was cured. Since that time he has simulated a cough, and Captain DeLancier, toplease him, has to have prepared a syrup water of similar taste to his medicine. Esau drinks of this at his receptions and afterwards smacks his lips. In all other respects his table manners are tions and afterwards smacks his lips. In all other respects his table manners are exceptional and he uses his knife, fork and napkin well. Girard Leon, the funmaker of the Darnum & Dailey circus, has scored a hit at Bostock's with his three donkeys. His act is exceedingly droll and creates much laughter. To these features are added the exhibitions of Madame Pianka, with her lion Rex, the 27 African lions of Captain Bonavita's; the snake charmer, Princess Brandea; and the trained wolves, hybrids, lions and bears of Mile. Beaufort. The attractions on the program surpass those attractions on the program surpass those of the previous week. The feeding of the animals at 4 and 10 p.m. is a sight which is worth more than the price of admission.

MRS. MERRILL'S ACTIVITIES. For several years past, Mrs. E. M. H. Merrill has been missed along the lines of her former activities in club and lec-ture work, as well as in journalistic helds, while she wrote under the nom de plume of Jean Kincaid, for she has de plume of Jean Kincaid, for she has been devoting herself entirely to the careful rearing of her two sons. But within the past few months the public have been able to welcome her among them once again. The "color question" has so aroused Mrs. Merrill's enthusiasm and interest that she has consented to speak before any Woman's club in this vicinity, explaining the Massachusetts plan for reorganization of the national federation. She is working hard as secretary of the Massachusetts committee on reorganization, and has just returned from New York, where the committee met in conference with members of the Georgia federation. The results of this conference are being kept most secret, but it is rumored that a settlement, agreeable to both north and south, is being worked up.

but it is rumored that a settlement, agreeable to both north and south, is being worked up.

In addition to this reorganization work, Mrs. Merrill is arranging a discussion of important current events, to be held at a meeting of the New England Wheaton Seminary club, on March 8. She will speak on reorganization at a union meeting of the Newton Woman's clubs to be held at West Newton, on March 7. She has already made her plans to attend the biennial of women's clubs, to be held at Los Angeles, Califormia, early in June. The following article appears in the February number of the "Club Calendar," a new monthly publication, and shows in condensed form Mrs. Merrill's scheme, which has been adopted by the Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs:

SOME REASONS WHY REORGANIZA-TION SHOULD PREVAIL.

SOME REASONS WHY REORGANIZATION SHOULD PREVAIL.

There are so many good reasons for urging the reorganization of the General Federation of Women's clubs on state lines, according to the plan proposed by Massachusetts club wonien, that it is quite impossible to enumerate them all within present limits, and we must be content with mentioning only a few of the most important.

First. The General Federation is organized on a plan which did very well at its inception, a dozen years ago, before state federations were thought of, but is not at all suited to its present conditions. It is illogical for a club of infeen, twenty, or thirty members to stand side by side in the general federation with state federations numbering as many thousands. It is unreasonable to make a fetich of our present constitution, or plan of work, and to say that, because the federation began as a union of individual clubs, it must always remain such. The conditions have changed vastly in the nast decade and if the general of individual clubs, it must always remain such. The conditions have changed vastly in the past decade, and if the general federation were to be started today, it would be organized, unquestionably with the state as a unit of membership instead of the individual club. Let us show ourselves capable of adapting ourselves to changed conditions and reorganize according to present needs.

Second, this anomalous and unsymmetrical form of organization leads to many ganize according to present needs.

Second, this anomalous and unsymmetrical form of organization leads to many inconsistencies and absurdities in matters of taxation and representation, which would be done away with by reorganization on state lines.

At present the burden of taxation or dues in the general federation is very unequally distributed and the representation at biennials is not at all in proportion to the financial support received from each state, nor to the membership. Taxation without proper representation is something we have always objected to in this country.

This is not the place in which to give columns of statistics, but if any interested reader will take the official list of federated clubs and examine the figures given there she will find many facts to interest and instruct.

For example it will be found that the average club in Massachusetts has a membership of 137, pays into the general federation treasury $13.70 annually and has two delegates to the biennial. While in southern and western states the average club varies in membership from 22 federation treasury $13.70 annually and has two delegates to the biennial. While in southern and western states the average club varies in membership from 22 in Texas to 24 in North Dakota, 28 in Indiana, 35 in Nebraska and Iowa, 36 in Kansas and Arkansas, etc. But a club in Texas, paying the general federation $2.25 in annual dues, or one in Indiana paying $2.80, or one in Iowa $3.50, or in Kansas paying $3.60, will have at the biennial one-half the voting strength of the average Massachusetts club, which has from nearly four to over six times as many members, and pays from four to six times as much in dues.

Again, the examination of this list shows that only a small proportion of the clubs in most states hold direct membership in the general federation, and are subject to the annual per capita tax of ten cents per member. Thus only about one-fourth of all the clubs in the country bear the financial burden of the general federation, the country bear the financial burden of the general federation, the remainder holding membership only through their state federations and paying a merely nominal sum. (These figures are based upon the most recent printed list, corrected to May, 19(1).)

Finally, and most important of all, the

May, 1901.)
Finally, and most important of all, the Massachusetts plan of reorganization on state lines, if accepted by the general federation, will undoubtedly settle the color question, which now threatens to disrupt our great organization.
This plan is a compromise measure, and should be recognized and accepted as such by all. The southern clubs came late into an organization which had been brill to broad and generous lines. It as such by all. The southern clubs came late into an organization which had been built on broad and generous lines. It had no class distinctions of any sort. All were welcomed who could help, or be helped, within its borders. And now the new comers demand, as the price of remaining with this organization so lately sought, that a most radical change shall be made in its very nature and character, by drawing the color line across its constitution; thus shutting out some whom we should help, putting exclusiveness in the place of inclusiveness, and establishing a rule of caste and so-claid prejudices instead of a democracy and altruism and brotherly love.

Our General Federation of Women's clubs is something more than a social organization. It is, or should be, a great engine for good along innumerable lines of effort. It is not even national, but "general," international, in its scope, and as such the local "color question" should no more disturb its course than a difference of taste concerning the prevailing fashion in sleeves!

Not that this is a trifling matter by any means. We women of the General Federation of Women's clubs have the duty, the privilege, of helping to solve the greatest sociological problem which confronts our nation today by our votes at Los Angeles next spring. May we confronts our nation today by our votes at Los Angeles next spring. May we have ability and grace and unselfishness and courage equal to the task!

Among the diners were Speaker Myers, who is ambitious to be the Republican candidate for Heutenant-governor, next fall; Representatives Adams, of Melrose, and Newton, of Everett, both of whom are credited with aspirations to succeed to the speaker's chair upon Mr. Myers' rose, who is a candidate for president of the next state senate.

There was no attempt to launch a boom for either. The situation gave Mr. Hayes an opportunity to be satirical in his introduction of the different speakers, and he very frankly announced that Mr. Jones was a candidate for president of the senate, and Mr. Newton for speaker of the house, and intimated that Mr. Myers might be looking for the support of the delegation in the near future.

Among those who attended were Senators Wood, of Woburn, Sparks, of Dracut. Apsey, of Cambridge, T. F. Porter, of Essex, and Nye, of the Cape, the two latter as guests, and Representatives Luce, of Somerville, Crosby, of Arlington, Stearns, of Waltham, Lewis, of Cambridge, McNair and Cheney, of Lowell, Story, of Somerville, Hunter, of Marlboro, Dowse and Schofield, of Malden, Bullard, of Newton, Lombard Williams, of Medford, Cutler, of Holliston, and Googins, of Cambridge.

Remarks were made by Speaker Myers, Senator Jones, Representative Newton, Senator Wood, Representative Dowse and others.

Mr. Myers alluded to the laws which Dowse and others.

Mr. Myers alluded to the laws which restricted the operation of public service corporations in Massachusetts on "safe and sound lines." In this connection he referred to the approval which these laws had met in the report of the industrial commission just made public at Washington, and he asked his colleagues if it were not better to have this approval than the criticism of the counsel from Buffalo (Mr. Milburn), recently made before the Commercial club, in Boston, that Massachusetts was too strict in its supervision of these corporowse and others.

Boston, that Massachusetts was too strict in its supervision of these corporations and that it should open its doors for easier capitalization.

Mr. Newton, in the course of his remarks, suggested that the great problem which the legislature of Massachusetts was called upon to solve was that of municipal government. The problem of municipal government was in its infancy not only in Massachusetts but in the whole country. Cities and towns the whole country. Cities and towns were allowed to pile up enormous debts, sometimes for improvements, doubtful in their character, and in their advantages. This situation, he believed, would have to be met by the legislature in the near

THE ALLIGATOR.

He Is Always In Good Humor When Ca'ching Flies.

"The alligator is a funny beast," said the old circus man. "The old fel-mor. One would think a fly a small tidbit for an alligator, but they eat them wholesale. Our old alligator is an expert fly catcher. He throws back his upper jaw and goes to sleep apparently. The flies light on his under jaw, and he waits until it is pretty well covered with flies-until its red color seems about changed to black. Then suddenly he slams down his upper jaw, and he has a fine mouthful of flies. Alligators would make excellent flytraps for houses where there are no children, except that they are expensive, as they consume such a vast quantity of beef."—Houston Post.

Talking For Buncombe.

The expression was used toward the close of the famous debate on the Missouri compromise in the sixteenth congress (1821). Buncombe, a county in the western section of North Carolina, was then part of the congressional district represented by Felix Walker, a resident of Waynesville, in the adjacent county of Haywood.

The house was impatient to bring the long debate to an issue when old man Walker (he was then sixty-eight years of age) rose to speak, and he was greeted with loud clamors for "Ques-Several members gathered tion." around him, begging him to desist; others left the hall, but he kept the floor, declaring that the people of his district expected a speech from him, that he was bound to talk for Buncombe (or words to that effect), and he did.

This Felix Walker had been in his younger days the friend and companion of Daniel Boone when the latter explored Kentucky and founded Boonsborough. After representing North Carolina from 1817 to 1823 he was a member of the state legislature and died in 1830 a short time after removing to Mississippi.

German Birthday Cakes.

The custom of having a birthday cake is widespread in Germany. I know it for certain that it is prevalent in the province of Saxony, in Hanover and the mark of Brandenburg. As many lights as the one whose birthday it is has years are stuck around the cake, or the Torte, a thick one in the middle, called the Lebenslicht, the light of life. For persons advanced in years one candle must do duty, as otherwise too many would be required, or a skillful lady expresses the exact number of years in Roman figures (XX, L).

When Moltke completed his seventieth year during the campaign of 1870-71, Crown Prince Frederick William, later on Emperor Frederick, presented him with a cake adorned with seventy lights. Only he or she who celebrates his or Saved the Lamp. An amusing scene occurred at a New York dock the other night. A Scotch engineer, who wished to go ashore, ordered a boy to show him the way with a lantern. As he was crossing the narrow plank that served as a gangway the boy slipped and fell into the water.

The instinct of the true Scot instant ly showed itself. "Hold on to the lamp, boy," the engineer shouted, leaning over toward the water. "Do you hear? If it's lost, there's a dollar gone from your wages."

After some time the boy was rescued half drowned, but clinging to the lamp. As some compensation for his trouble he was forgiven for losing the bottom of it.

A Lottery. It happened in the county clerk's of-

"I want a lottery ticket," he said.

"Certainly," replied the polite clerk. He knew a thing or two, did the clerk. A little thing like an old joke could not disturb him. "We don't call 'em lottery tickets, but of course they are much the same thing." Then he filled out the marriage license and collected $3.-Chicago Post.

Dickens' Finances.

Dickens did not begin to save money until he was nearly forty, and throughout life he suffered acutely and incessantly from pecuniary worries and anxieties. He was never short of ready money after his great crisis of 1844, but he was never easy about the future until after his enormously profitable second American trip in the winter of 1867-68.

Secrets of Comfort. Though sometimes small evils, like invisible insects, inflict pain and a single hair may stop a vast machine, yet the chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex one and in prudently cultivating an undergrowth of small pleasures, since very few great ones, alas, are let on long leases.

New-Haven, January, 1731-2. death and will of his deceased Cambridge brother, has conceived a violent passion for the relict. As love softens the mind and the thoughts turn to poetry, he has eased himself of the following strains, which he transmits to the charming widow as the first essay of his love and courtship.

Mistress Abbey, To you I fly; You only can relieve me;

To you I turn,
For you I burn,
If you will but believe me.
Then gentle dame,
Admit my flame,

Then, gentle dame,
Admit my flame,
And grant me my petition.

If you deny,
Alas: I die
In pitiful condition.

Before the news
Of your dear spouse
Had reached us at New-Haven,
My wife dv'd,
Who was my bride,
In anno eighty-seven;
That being free,
Let's both agree
To join hands, for I do
Boldly aver,
A widower
Is fittest for a widow,
You may be sure
'Tis not your dow'
I talk so very terse on
In these smooth lays,
I only praise
The beauties of your person,
For the whole that
Was left by Mat,
Fortune to me has granted,
In equal store.
I've one thing more,
Which Matthew long had wanted.
No teeth, 'tis true,
You have to shew,
The young think teeth inviting,
But silly yout!

The young think teeth inviting, But silly youth! I love those mouths Where there's no fear of biting.

leaky eye That's never dry,
These woful times, is fitting;
Awrinkled face
Adds solemn grace
To folks devout at meeting.

Adds solemn grace
To folks devout at meeting.
Thus to go on,
I would pen down
Your charms from head to foot.
Set all your glory
In verse before ye:
But I've no mind to do it.
Then haste away.
And make no stay.
For soon as you come hither
We'll eat and sleep,
Make beds and sweep,
An't talk and smoke together.
But if, my dear,
I must move there,
Tow'rds Cambridge, I'll get me,
To touse the hay
On which you lay.
If age and you will let me.
Thus Father Abbey left his spouse,
As rich as church, or college mouse,
Which is sufficient invitation—

SUNDAY FISHING AND HUNTING.

It is interesting to learn from the latest It is interesting to learn from the latest annual report of the fish and game commissioners that, as a result of the enforcement of the fish and game laws, Sunday fishing and hunting have been reduced to a minimum as compared with former years in Massachusetts. As to whether this reformation is due to a growing respect for the laws for the preservation and propagation of fish and game, or for the holiness of the Sabbath day the commissioners do not undertake to say, but the inference is that they are rather disposed to ascribe it to the forrather disposed to ascribe it to the former influence. A UNIT.

We had heard so much upon the street and elsewhere concerning a division in the opinion of Arlington's board of selectmen relative to the more vital interests of the town that we took the trouble and time to go to headquarters and personally inform ourselves of the truthfulness or otherwise of the rumors, where we found that this present board of selectmen have been a unit upon every important question affecting the interests of the town. While no official board may expect to escape criticism, the Enterprise is free to say that in its opinion Arlington's selectmen deserve much credit for the ability and faithfulness with which they have executed their official trust.

"WHOM CAN YOU TRUST?"

Mighty few, is our reply to the above query. By this negative answer is not meant that one may not trust most people in a business way, though many in this department of life will bear close watching, for there are those who will not hesitate to drive you to the wall, if thereby they may promote their own selfish ends. In a larger way, we mean by the above interrogation that there are but comparatively few whom you can trust so far as the so-called friendships of life are concerned. It is an easy matter to write, "truly your friend"-all this slips easily from the pen-while it is quite another thing to prove yourself the friend you profess yourself to be. There isn't a more greatly misused term in the English language than that of "friend." The truth is, one has but few real friends-those who are such as will stand the test can all be counted on one hand. How many men, think you, would be willing to put themselves in your place in times of great misfortune and discouragement? Don't count on every man you meet as gyour friend. Just wait until you are obliged to row against the current, and so see for yourself whether he is willing to dip into the troubled waters a helping oar for you. Friends are of slow growth. They are and always must be the product of a heart-soil. They are not born of outward material surroundings. They take hold of the inner life. They do not seem, but are. They are vital, and must touch you at a vital point. You can only trust him or her who lives not with you or alongside of you, but in you.

TO ESCAPE UTTERLY.

To escape utterly from others is oftentimes a blessed relief. To rid one's self occasionally of old faces and old friends is altogether restful. The same old story becomes tiresome to the best of us. We need to get out more or less frequently into the fields and woods, where nature has her own say. "I am trying to get away from myself," said a belated traveler to us, one evening, whom we met on our homeward way. And this is just what we are all trying to do when the hours sit heavily upon us. The truth is, man needs recreating daily. If he is to successfully measure up to his highest aspirations, each day must bring him a new birth. He must get away from himself if he would take in the world in all its fulness. We need to push out, and not longer hug the shore. Get away from the old environments, then will there be a new world to each of us. What Arlington, Lexington and Belmont need is a resurrected life, and this same is true of all suburban localities. All our metropolitan centres with their near surrounding life live too much in the past. They tell over and over again their earlier history. It isn't the past with which we have to do so much as it is the now and the tomorrow-not so much what our fathers did, and did so well, as it is what are we doing and what our children are to do after us.

Lexington Green can serve us no longer, other than a memory and an inspiration. Arlington and Belmont cannot survive on the fact that some of their brave men were shot down on the day of the battle fought at Lexington so many years agone. Our lives have to do with the now and with the lives of others, and we shall only reach out to the lives of others as we first get away from our-

Nothing kills out the man as does a supreme selfishness. To get alone and apart by one's self is to pretty accurately get one's measure. To get rid of ourselves is the greatest lesson we have yet to learn, and when learned we shall have come to know the greater joy of living, for then we shall be living for others. To lose ourselves is to find the other man.

HOW DELIGHTFUL!

How delightful it would be were one to possess the ability and culture to alays write in such glowing rhetoric and to indulge in such well rounded periods that his readers would involuntarily exclaim with what more than eastern inspiration does he clothe his thoughts in the choicest English. If the columns of the weekly newspaper abounded in metaors the most telling, and in that poetwhich should hardly differ from the bodiment of the sweetest song, how satisfactory all this would be to the editor of a country journal. If the journalist could only receive by his morning's mail word from his many readers assuring him that his editorials are read in every instance with delight-that his use of language is the choicest, while the thought conveyed indicates both the scholar and the philosopher! Under such conditions what a field the editor would have all to himself. But no, the situation is not this. The newspaper writer must accept things as he finds them. In the first place, he must accept the fact that he has yet many things to learn. He must be willing to openly confess that his use of language is not absolutely faultless. When some one of his critical readers stoutly asserts that he has used the comma where he should have used the semicolon, he oughtn't to be in tco great haste to dispute him. If the ournalist is now and then accused of indulging in hyperbole, he ought not to waste time in long defending himself against the accusation, for more than likely the writer has put the point exessively and somewhat exaggerated the fact. The truth is the newspaper world is bound to recognize its surroundings. and shape its work accordingly. He who writes for no other purpose than to gain pepular applause is sure to meet disappointment on every side. For the most part the average reader does not peruse the editorial writings of the newspaper to flatter and to commend, but to criticize and to play the school master, And all this is well, for "under fire" the writer is driven to his best. That writer de serves a medal in spite of any occasional misuse of language, if he gives the reader a real thought. To know and then to boldly speak is the test of a manly courage. To say something is always a positive act. What the reading public wants and rightfully demands is bread and not a stone. It isn't so much grammar and rhetoric they need as it is the full corn in the ear. We too frequently stop and liscuss trifles while the weightier matters of the law are allowed to pass unnoticed. One can well afford to now and then excuse the biggest sort of a blunder in language, provided a thought has been expressed. No. no. it isn't the ability and culture to write in flowing rhetoric that is so much needed, as it is the ability and courage to say something. It isn't so much poetry that the world needs as it is good, sensible prose. He writes best who communicates to his readers a real live thought, made intense with his own individual life, and this is just what the Enterprise is attempting to do.

Now is the time right on the eve of town meeting, that your Mr. Know-it-all who never gets anywhere, says "I could run for selectman, but there's nothing in it for me." There are some men who would know more in the morning, if they would put their heads to soak over

The greatest curiosity in the world is that man who doesn't think he could run a country newspaper better than the publisher and editor put together.

There is many an "engagement" takes place other than on the field of battle. It is that kind of an "engagement" when both parties surrender.

Courtesy is thrown away on many a man. It is absolutely useless to be polite to that man who doesn't know enough to say "thank you."

ROYAL ARCANUM.

Arlington Members and Invited Guests Blow Smoke Rings and Listen to Intertaining Facts—Order Has Grown Fast and Still Growing.

Menotomy council, Royal Arcanum, gave a smoke talk at G. A. R. hall, Arlington, Tuesday evening. A lodge meeting was held from 7 to 8, after which the smoker was thrown open to guests from outside the order. Grand Regent Daniel R. Beckford, Jr., made the principal address, taking as his theme the Royal Arcanum from both the financial and the fraternal sides. He spoke enthusiastically of the purposes of the order and its rapid progress, giving in detail its plan and scope and commending the advantages to be derived from its social side. The grand chaplain also spoke on the fraternal and social aspects of the order, turning his attention more to the ideal than to the material. Entertainment was furnished during the course of the smoker by George B. Cutler, of Somerville, who rendered several vocal solos, with his own accompaniment.

After the speeches and singing, the meeting became more informal, members of the order and guests joining in a social time. A number of guests were present from Cambridge and other near-

ARLINGTON BOAT CLUB.

B. A. A. WINS TWO.

B. A. A. started in slowly on the boat club alleys. Wednesday evening, and as a result fell by the wayside, the first game going to the home team by 49 pins. Legate was the only B. A. A. man to begin to get his gait, while Rankin and Whittemore did the best work for Arlington B. C. On the second game, B. A. A. made up their minds to do a little rolling, for it had to be two straight or down they would go in the standing. All rolled well with the exception of Legate, whose efforts in the first game were too much for him. The speed put up by B. A. A. rattled Arlington's nerve, and the game went to the visitors by 86 pins. In that game Ainsworth rolled 212, the highest single of the night. Both teams went to the bad in the third game, and the rolling fell off almost 100 pins, and while B. A. A. was bad, A. B. C. was worse, and the visitors pulled out the odd game, 886 to 810. Everything considered, the work was of a poor order. Arlington B. C. excelled on first ball work, making 53 strikes to 47 strikes by B. A. A. On spare work B. A. A. more than evened up and made the fine total of 80 against 66 by A./B. C. A. B. C. was way off on miss spares, having 20 scored against them. Both teams had fairly hard luck on breaks. Hill and Legate went through without a missed spare, and James had a clean bill on breaks. The score: B. A. A. WINS TWO.

Arlington Boat and Calumet rolled their match in the Mystic Valley tourna-ment at Winchester, Monday evening, and Arlington Boat won two out of three. The win will probably give the former champions third place in the final former champions third place in the final standing.

The match was rather slow, only one game being at all close, and the figures were only fair. Arlington carried off the honors in the figure line, putting up one single over 900, and topping the 25th century for aggregate, while 523 by Rugg was the top individual mark.

The third game, the one with the lowest totals, was the most closely rolled, and in a very exciting finish Calumet saved itself a coat of whitewash, by winning by 12 pins.

The big pin season in the Mystic Valley league ended Tuesday evening, and Charlestown wins the honors in the league with 33 wins. The other club from the same district, 999th A. A. took second honors, 10 games behind the winner. It is a case of tie between Arlington and Medford for third, and another tie between Newtowne and Towanda exists for fifth place. Calumet has seventh position, and Old Belfry brings up the rear. The latter club, however, redeemed itself to some extent by winning the series in whist.

MILL FIGHT EXENSION.

A vigorous movement against the proposed Broad street extension, to provide a more direct route between the North and South terminals, was begun by the Boston Market Gardeners' association, Staturday afternoon. The meeting took place in the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, and was called to order by its president, W. W. Rawson, of Arlington extension; how it would cut through the heart of the market and eject from their stands dealers who had occupied the same places for twenty-five successive years. This he did not think was warranted by the necessities for speed between stations.

Many of the members of the association were called upon to express their opinions on the matter, and all voiced the sentiments of the president, and called for some action to back up their opinion. Finally a committee of seven to act in opposition to the extension was chosen, as follows: W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, D. F. Strange, of Stoneham, N. Sullivan and W. H. Daly, of Revere, E. N. Pierce, of Waltham, J. O. Wellington, of Belmont, and Aaron Low, of Hingham. A vigorous movement against the pro-

SOUSA'S NAME.

The Enterprise is indebted to Miss Marion H. Brazier, editor of that progressive magazine, The Patriotic Review, for a bona fide correction of a popular, though incorrect, story which the Enterprise published last week, explaining how Sousa got his name. The story was to the effect that the famous musician's real name was John Phillipso but not liking the name, he added USA to it, making it read John PhillipSousa. In the Patriotic Review this month, the story is reprinted, but with this addition, "All this reads very prettily, and it has gone the rounds of the American Press for years. We wrote Mr. Sousa some time ago regarding it, and received a reply that it was not true, although it served an admirable purpose from the press agent's standpoint."

Tie Up of Business Will Follow.

Council 126, of the Painters' union, has ordered a strike in Arlington, beginning March 1. A paper has been circulated among the workmen and 24 names have been secured to date. The demand is for the enforcement of the eight-hour law, with the same scale of wages as is now practically to tie up the painting indusin Arlington, and the leaders of the movement claim to have interested the majority of them to such an extent as practically to tie up the painting industry in town unless the master painters concede the points at issue. The union has served notice upon the master painters, stating their demands in full, and with sufficient backing from those outside of the union, it is thought, will either compel acceptance of their terms or put a stop to the present activity in the business.

THE LINE BIBLE SCHOOL.

A thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent at the hall of the Arlington Line Bible school, last week Wednesday. Rev. A. F. Newcomb gave his lecture on "Pullman, Portrait and Prairie," in which he took his hearers on a trip through Canada and the western states. So interesting were the facts which he brought out, and so unexpected and numerous his bursts of wit and humorous application that the enjoyment of the audience was far above the expectation of the most enthusiastic. The highest praise was merited by those carrying out the musical part of the program. Miss Lockhart is decidedly an artist on the violin, and her selections, being a rich treat, were greatly appreciated. The vocal numbers by Miss Millmore, Miss Gohring and Mr. Hardy were of a high order and contributed largely to the success of the evening. The accompaniments were played by Mrs. Newcomb, and were a credit to her profescompaniments were played by Mrs. New comb, and were a credit to her profession. WORLD.

The handsomest railway trains in the world are run over the Chicago & Alton Railway. No adjuncts to comforts of patrons are omitted in the furnishings, and the road-bed is the finest of the great trunk lines. It was of this railway line that Ellen Terry, the great actress, on her late trip westward, wrote George J. Charlton, the General Passenger Agent: "We have all had such a pleasant trip. I never had a happier journey by railway car in my life. With very many thanks for all our comfort, Yours sincerely, Ellen Terry."

PUTTING UP CURTAINS.

We saw a man the other day putting up curtains in the newly fitted rooms of his home, and he was doing the work with all the pattence that his excellent wife would have done the job. Now this man who was so assisting in household duties is no henpecked husband-he is the recognized equal of his wife, and the wife is the recognized equal of the husband. When these two married, they cheerfully accepted the scriptural injunction, "be ye not unequal yoked together." Each makes a good running mate for the other. They keep abreast in the journey of life. The one is never compelled to take the dust of the other. As you may well imagine, the household which we have in mind is a model one. In that home there are no contentions about "women's rights" or men's rights. Why not have it thus in every home? Family jars should never be found in the domestic market.

WANT MORE WATER.

Lexington people who are interested in the question of an additional water supply should attend the hearing before the legislative committee at room 439, Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. At that time the bill which is the result of A. E. Scott's petition will be up for discussion. The petition and bill calls for the issue of bonds not exceeding $25,000. The bill is as follows:

Section I. The town of Lexington for the purpose of increasing its water supply by means of driven, artesian or other wells, and by the construction and maintenance of filter beds, reservoirs and other works or structures which may be necessary or desirable for such purpose and for the purpose of potecting said water supply or any part thereof, may take from time to time by purchase or otherwise, and hold, any land in said town within the territory bounded northerly by Middle street, westerly by Waltham, Allen and Blossom streets, southerly by Concord avenue, and easterly by Massachusetts avenue and Pleasant street, together with any springs or streams therein or tributary thereto, and any water standing or flowing on, in or under said land, and any water rights connected therewith, and also all lands, rights of way and easements necessary for procuring, holding and preserving said water, for conveying the same to any part of said town, and for any other purpose connected with the maintenance of said water supply. Said town may erect on the lands taken or held under the authority of this act such wells, galleries, dams, buildings, fixtures, reservoirs and other structures as it may deem proper, and may make such excavations and procure and operate such machinery and do such other things as may be necessary for providing and maintaining effective water works; and for that purpose may construct, lay and maintain aqueducts, conduits, pipes and other works under and over any lands, roads or other ways within said territory and along any street, highway and other way in said town in such manner as shall not unnecessarily obst necessarily obstruct the same. The provisions of sections three and six of chapter two hundred and sixty-seven of the acts of eighteen hundred and eighty-one shall apply to said town and to all takings under this act, and to all structures or property that may be placed thereon.

All the authority granted to said town by this act and not otherwise specially provided for, shall be vested in the board of water commissioners of said town, who shall be subject, however, to such instructions as said town may impose by its vote.

such instructions as said town may impose by its vote.

Section 2. The town of Lexington, for the purposes mentioned in section one of this act, may borrow money from time to time and issue therefor negotiable bonds notes or scrip to an amount not exceeding the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars. Such bonds, notes or scrip shall be signed by the treasurer of the exceeding the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars. Such bonds, notes or scrip shall be signed by the treasurer of the town and, countersigned by the chairman of the board of water commissioners, and shall be denominated on the face thereof, Lexington Water Loan, Act of 1902. They shall be payable at the expiration of periods not exceeding thirty years from the dates of issue, and shall bear such rate of interest, not exceeding four per centum per annum, as the town may determine. The town may sell such securities at public or private sale, of pledge the same for not less than the par value thereof for money borrowed for the purposes aforesaid, upon such terms and conditions as it may deem proper, and shall make payable annually a fixed proportion of the principal of said bonds, notes or scrip; and the town shall raise annually by taxation the amount required to meet such interest and the proportion of the principal which is payable annually.

Section 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Mr. Cochrane was appointed last fall to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of H. S. Teele, and he now becomes the natural candidate for the balance of the term for which Mr. Teele was elected. As he will probably be the only candidate presented by East Lexington, he will receive the cordial support of all parts of the town as the representative of East Lexington upon the committee. Although he has served only a few months, he is very much interested in the schools, and is anxious to do his utmost for their advancement. Lexington is to be congratulated in having two candidates whose interests and occupation afford them so good an opportunity to serve the town well, and the Enterprise heartily endorses the hearty suprise heartily endorses the hearty sup-ort which is manifested by Lexington her home, last evening.

A large and pleasant party of members and friends of the Porcupine club assembled in Waverley hall, Wednessevening, at the February social overganization. Owing to some misunderstanding, but one member of the orchestra engaged to furnish music for the dancing made his appearance, Mrs. F. L. Gorham, wife of the secretary of the club, kindly offered her services as planist, so that, after some little delay, the dancing commenced, and was much enjoyed. Mrs. Gorham was warmly congratulated for her work, and sincerely thanked by those whom she had so greatly favored in their disappointment.

FROM THREE TO SIX.

An effort is to be made at the Lexington town meeting to increase the membership of the school committee from three to six, and the following article will appear in the warrant: To see if the town will vote to increase the number of its school committee to six members of which at least two shall-be women, all of whom except the secretary of the committee shall serve without pay, or act in any manner relating thereto.

This is indeed an innovation for the out pay, or act in any manner relating thereto.

This is indeed an innovation for the town, and will doubtless create some discussion. The state allows towns to elect any number of members of the school board, provided that number is divisible by three. The clause, however, relating to the number of women on the board cannot be made compulsory, but it is understood will be attached to the motion for an increase in, the membership as a sort of implied agreement.

Should such a vote be passed, it would not be operative until next year, so there will be lots of time to prepare candidates before that time. Just what is the cause of the proposed change is not divulged as yet, and until the project is fully explained, the voters appear to be undecided as to the advantages or disadvantages which might follow.

SENIOR CLASS DANCE.

The dance given by the senior class of the Lexington high school, Feb. 14, was a complete success. It was well attended by people from out of town as well as by a large number from Lexington. The dance was given for the purpose of raising the class fund and nearly fifty dollars was realized. The guests were received by Mrs. James E. Crone, Miss Moody and Mrs. Josiah O. Tilton, the members of the class acting as ushers. Harry Gallagher occupied the box office. The same dainty decorations of pink and white which had been used for the golf club party were left for this dance. Lemonade, furnished by the members of the class, proved refreshing to the dances consisting of seven waltzes, six two-steps, two schottisches, and one Portland fancy. After the dance the class drew lots for the artistic poster which Mr. Butler had made, and which was displayed the previous week in the postoffice. Miss Emma Macomber was the winner. The class consists of the Misses Dora Armes, Beatrice Batchelder, Jessie Brown, Lesslie Butterfield, Anita Dale, Helen French, Wimfred Griffin, Mabel Jackson, Emma Macomber, Georgle Peters, Ella Tewksbury, and Masters Harry Gallagher, Hugh Greeley, James McCarty, Henry Tilton and Richard Wellington.

MARTHA M. NORRIS.

ALICE N. ASHLEY.

Mrs. Alice N. Ashley, wife of Clifton P. Ashley, of Highland avenue, died Monday, aged 34 years. She was the daughter of George Norris, of Lexington. The funeral was held at her home, at 1 o'clock, Thursday. One child is left, Harold. Mrs. Ashley was a member of the Baptist church, and she will be greatly missed from the church circles in which she had a deep and abiding interest.

OUR BIRDS AT HOME

By JAMES SPEED

V.—The Bluebirds.

ATURE, "that kind old nurse," turns a page of her volume each day, and her pupils strive to understand her writing in living form and color. In winter, when there is a dearth of all life, she opens her volume for only a few short hours in each twenty-four that we may be fresh to begin work as she wakes all life in spring. Then there are days when we rouse to start on a new page, and, lo! she has covered it with a pure white mantle, and we can read very little. Then as the warmth of early spring comes stealing from the southland and she sees our growing enthusiasm she relents and each day leaves the book open longer

How she illuminates each page with flashes of bird color, bright in their nuptial clothes, and punctuates each sentence with soft colored spring flowers! All through the great season of reproduction in animal and vegetable life, that period when Nature is lavish in color and song and soft breezes, she opens her great book wide for our inspection. After we have worked hard to learn the lessons so gorgeously illustrated she again begins to shorten our study hours that we may not overtax ourselves.

When winter snows are still on the ground, the little bluebird, the little fellow "with the sky on his back," knows that spring is coming, and, flying to the top of a nearby honey locust, with drooping, fluttering wings he warbles a few soft, low notes. Soon his mate seats berself close by, and then his warble becomes stronger and longer, and he tells her that his love for her is as bright as his ruddy little breast.

He is such an ardent lover that often he persuades his ladylove to go to housekeeping before spring has really come, and I have found a nestful of their pale blue eggs as early as the 10th of March. But they are devoted to their home, whether the wind blows hot or cold, and as the nest is in some cavity they can keep their eggs warm, as they make very warm and cozy nests in the early spring. Any natural cavity will answer equally well, and not infrequently a hole in a large gatepost is used, but they never select a cavity which is far from the ground, and it is usually so low that you can put your hand in it. The eggs are five or six in number, and usually two sets are laid and hatched each season. If the season is specially good, a third brood is raised.

How strange it is, that wonderful effect of Nature and her varying moods upon man's mental attitude! A dark, gloomy day upsets him, but a glad, bright day, full of bird music and color, sends the blood surging through his veins and into his cheeks. This fact is the secret of the everlasting youth of those who love nature truly, for no day is too dark or dreary for them to note some bird or animal which gives life to an otherwise dark day. A lover of nature need not be one who is versed in scientific names and dates, but one who simply notices and cultivates a love for the beautiful as it is revealed from day to day. People spend time and money cultivating a love for art in sculpture or printing or literature. Then why not cultivate a love for nature? Nature paints as no man ever yet painted. Her lines are better, and her color schemes are unsurpassed. She chisels better than our best sculptors, and her open book can be read by those who do not know the alphabet.

Before the advent of the English sparrow the bluebird nested in bird boxes in every farmyard, but now the sparrow needs them and drives the bluebirds off. It is a great pity, for the bluebird is essentially an insectivorous bird. If a person has never watched a pair of bluebirds feeding their young on insects, he cannot conceive the number consumed in the course of a single summer day. When the east is still gray, the old birds are busy, and when the light ding in the west they still hurry. Every time they come to the nest all mouths gape, and each seems hungrier than its neighbor.

In the fall, when the young are able to fly, the birds form in small bands and appear uneasy as the time for their southern journey approaches. If the weather remains mild, they linger and sometimes do not leave until late in

The head, wings, back and tail are blue; the breast and sides are a rich, ruddy chestnut, and the abdomen is white. The female is decidedly lighter in color. The length of this little bird is about seven inches.

. . . The bluejay is our largest bluebird and is therefore very easily identified. Indeed we have very few bluebirds. The jay, who keeps his gay coat on in winter and summer; the bluebird and the blithe little indigo bunting, who dons his blue jacket each spring before he starts north, are practically all of

The jay is a versatile mimic and withal a most conceited coxcomb; but, unlike most conceited fellows, he is an ardent lover and an exemplary husband and father. When the spring sun bursts the buds on the apple boughs, how strong his love becomes! He cannot contain himself, and if his ladylove is not near the goes into ecstasies over his own fine coat and figure. See him on that low hanging bough! Don't let him see you, but watch his antics. There, with an awkward apology for a bow, he whispers, "Che-da-lit, cheda-lit, jaybird, jaybird!" As the sound comes into his throat he jerks it out by bobbing up and down. The sound is so faint that it is almost inaudible at a distance of a hundred feet, but he only intends it for a rehearsal of his love song. Now he preens a wing or a tail feather and erects his crest and again and again repeats his amorous pleadings to his own great gratification. Suddenly he sees us, and, raising his rasping voice to its highest pitch, he screams "Jay-jay-jay-jay!" and flies clear out of the orchard.

In the fall and winter the jays are found in small bands. These crowds are noisy and boisterous, but all seem to be on good terms, although it sounds as if they were continually quarreling.

But with all his love of being loud and boisterous he is careful to be quiet whenever he is near his nest. A pair built their nest in a red cedar near my front porch, and so quiet were they about it that I did not discover it until it was nearly completed. Even then I found it by chance. I saw a warbler fly into the tree, and, not recognizing it, I got my glasses. While searching the close foliage with the glasses for the warbler I saw a jay creeping through the tree with its bill full of grasses. I followed him with the glasses and discovered the nearly finished nest. I watched this pair of jays during the whole nesting period and never heard any sound except very low conversational notes, which could not be heard more than seventy-five feet. When this pair were in the woods near at hand, they were as noisy as usual, but the moment they started toward their nest they became silent again. When approaching their nest, they never flew by the house and entered the trees where they could be seen from the porch. They invariably flew around by a wide circuit and entered the tree on the side screened from the front porch by the heavy foliage. Then they would sit quietly looking about, and if they saw no danger of being detected they would hop slowly from limb to limb across the tree to their nest. The nest usually contains five eggs of a beautiful brownish olive color, spotted with olive brown.

Now, although the jay is so well known and such a conspicuous figure in his bright plumage, I cannot leave him without describing him for the benefit of those who happen to be so unfortunate as not to have made his acquaintance. The whole upper surfaces are blue, becoming more brilliant on wings and tail. The wing when closed shows an irregular white stripe, and the shorter wing quills have narrow transverse black bars. The wings also show a few irregular white spots. The tail is long and has the same transverse black bars which characterize the shorter wing quills. The outer tail quills have broad white tips. When flying, the jay spreads his tail, and these spots become a broad white band. His head is adorned with a fine crest. A narrow black line completely encircles the neck. Passing just behind the crest, It continues down, forming a distinct dividing line between throat and breast. There is a small black spot on each side of the head between the bill and the eye. The throat and breast are French gray, shading into pure white on the abdomen and under tail coverts. The heavy black bill is slightly notched near the tip. Bill, legs and feet are blue black. He is quite a large bird, measuring about ten inches.

Text of the Lesson, Acts vi, 1-15 Memory Verses 7, 8-Golden Text, Matt. x, 28-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.] 1, 2. "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God and serve tables." This was the decision of the twelve when there began to be some murmuring among the disciples concerning the daily ministration of things temporal. As the number of the disciples multiplied it could hardly be expected that in these newborn babes there would not be manifest some phases of the old nature, some of the works of the flesh, such as wrath, strife, surgings and such like (Gal. v, 20). Even Peter, James and John might remember quite a number of things in their own lives, even after they had been a year or two with Christ, which were of the flesh and not of the spirit; so it is to be hoped that while they determined that they could not take time to see to these seemingly unspiritual affairs they were patient with the murmurers.

3, 4. "We will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word." They would not serve tables, but they would pray and search and teach the word. They recognized the importance and the difficulty of attending to the daily ministration, for they saw the necessity of a committee of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom.

5, 6. "They chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip." The other five are not men-tioned again after this verse, which is not necessarily anything against them. Philip is mentioned sixteen times and Stephen, who became the first martyr for Christ, is mentioned seven times. If the mind of the majority is a correct guide, then the appointing of this committee was the proper thing, for the suggestion pleas-ed the whole multitude. There was some thing in those days in the laying on of hands (I Tim. iv, 14; II Tim. i, 6), but it was not confined to the hands of the apostles (Acts ix, 17; xiii, 3). The laying on of hands in our day is not unlike the shaking of hands; sometimes there are life and inspiration and sometimes a chill. Barnabas, the son of consolation, was like Stephen, a man full of the Holy Ghost and of faith (chapter xi, 24). There is no reason why each believer should not

7, 8, "And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people." The word of God increased, or, as in xii, 24, "grew and multiplied," and in xix, 20, "grew mightily and prevailed." The number of the disciples multiplied greatly in Jerusalem, and a great company of the priests became believers. It was truly a great and mighty work of the Spirit of God and was not confined to the apostles, for Stephen, willing to serve tables, was greatly used, God working wonders and miracles by him. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth (Rom. i, 16), and as the word is preached the Spirit works, convincing of sin and righteousness and judgment. When a servant of Christ preaches the word of God, he has a right to believe that it will accomplish His pleasure and never return to Him void (Isa. lv, 11). We may learn a lesson of assurance from the devil in this matter, for when he sowed his tares he seems to have had no anxiety about their growth, for he went his way, sure that they would grow (Matt. xiii, 25). Let us have faith in God that He will take care of His own word and that no word from God shall be void of power (Luke i, 37, R. V). 9, 10. "They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake." The Lord Jesus had promised a mouth and wisdom which no adversary could gainsay or resist (Luke xxi, 15), and this was a fulfillment of His promise The wisdom was the wisdom of God and the spirit was the Spirit of God. As with the Lord Jesus the words and works were all the Father's, so in these Spirit filled men the words and works were all the Lord's (Jon xiv, 10; xvii, 18). We think of the night in Gethsemane when, in reply to their saying that they sought Jesus of Nazareth, He simply said, "I am," and they went backward and fell to the ground. It was the same word that ground. healed the leper, cast out demons, rebuk ed fevers and all manner of disease, stilled the storm and, away back in the begin-ning, created all things. What do we know of the power of His word in us or through us, or of the experience of Paul in these words: "Striving according to His working which worketh in me might-(Col. i, 29.)

11, 12. "They caught him and brought him to the council." The adversary can stand ten thousand ordinary believers of the Laodicean stamp and be not a whit afraid of them, but let a Peter or a Stephen, filled with the Spirit, stand boldly for Christ and the resurrection, and the devil will do his best to stop them. The power of God in Stephen was more than Satan could put up with, and so he stirs up the rulers and the people to lie about him and to arrest him.

13, 14. "And set up false witnesses." So Jezebel did to Naboth, and so these same rulers did to our Lord Jesus. It was written concerning Him, "False witnesses did rise up; they laid to My charge things that I knew not." "They that hate Me without a cause are more than the hairs of Mine head; they that would destroy Me, being Mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty" (Ps. xxxv, 11; lxix, 4). We must, if we follow Him fully, expect the same treatment He re-ceived, for "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (II Tim. iii, 12), and He Himself said, "If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you" (John xv, 20).

15. "And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel." He was no doubt thinking of the Lord Jesus and all that Christ had endured for him. By faith he saw Christ and not these wicked witnesses or rulers, and the glory of Christ was seen upon him. We are apt to think it very hard when people wrongfully accuse us and lay to our charge things we know not, but we should consider it as blessed fellowship with Christ, remembering His own words, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for My sake; rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven" (Matt. v, 11, 12). Some associate this angel-like appearance of Stephen with the time of his martyrdom, but it was before he gave his address to the council. May we ever so see Jesus that we shall reflect His Ideas Not Essentially Our Own.

WAS IT ENGLAND OR GERMANY It has been very generally accepted as a fact that England's refusal to join the coalition alone prevented the joint intervention of the European powers in Spain's behalf at the outbreak of the late war. England's authorized spokesmen have so stated, publicly, and their representations were unquestioned in any

The belief of the American people that it was to England's friendliness they were indebted for the avertion of armed intervention by the great world powers has tended to draw the nations together and has tended to restrain our own national antipathy to England's unjustifiable course in South Africa. England was our friend when we needed a friend, let us stand by her now, was the natural expression of our national gratitude for supposed friendliness.

But was England our friend? Is it a fact that England's action alone prevented intervention by the powers? Or is it, on the contrary, true that it was England or England's representative that proposed, instead of opposed, inter-

It begins to look as if the history of this episode would have to be rewritten. Germany is claiming the credit England has thus far enjoyed, and we are compelled to admit that Germany's contention is formidable. Germany claims that it was her refusal favorably to respond to England's advances that led the powers to abandon all thought of intervention in Spain's behalf. Was it? Is it indeed true that Engand's representative at Washington actually took the initiative in proposing to the powers that a second collective note be addressed to our government, protesting against our contemplated hostilities in Cuba as unjustified? It not only tegins to look as if this might be so; it actually looks even as if it were so.

The publications, with all the appearance of formal authorization, of the note of Germany's ambassador at Washington to his government, enclosing a opy of the English ambassador's proposal, seems to give the lie direct to the history of the episode as it has been heretofore told. Unless these things are fictitious, England's pretensions are unfounded, and it is to Germany our gratitude should go out as to our one friend in time of need. Germany refused to be a party to the intervention proposed by England's representatives. If it shall clearly appear that it was

Germany, and not England, that prevented intervention by refusing to join in it, the feeling of the people of this country for England is more than likely to revert to the historic, national prejudice; and Germany is more than likely to take first place in our affec-We are a grateful people. THE TRUE ISSUE.

The owners of the Westminster Chambers are before the legislature with another bill for relief. The case is now so old and the petitioners so persistent, that the eyes of a good many of the citizens are blinded to the real issue. The question is not whether the building is too high or too low to be artistic, or to subserve the laws of health, but whether or not a man or men may deliberately, wilfully and knowingly ignore the laws of the commonwealth, trusting to the powers of persuasion or money to secure a change of the laws to suit their particular case. It is whether the laws are made for the poor man to obey and the rich man to ignore, or are made for all men alike. The projectors of the Chambers knew what they were doing when they ran their building up ten feet above the limit. Perhaps they had their own idea of the composition of the Massachusetts legislature. Perhaps, in the light of a certain dinner and the immediate change of mind of sufficient legislators to change the vote on the hosts' bill for

MISS GRETA MASSON.

When a writer sets out to give an account of a person or an event, if he is a bit tired and pessimistic, he will hear somebody saying, "Who cares?" unless of course the person to be told about, is an old stager whose very name is dean old stager whose very name is descriptive, or the event is a fire or a runaway match. But when there is some one thing about which everybody cares, the pessimistic gentleman disappears, and the writer waxes enthusiastic. A criticism of Miss Masson, which should come to the essential point at once, would have to do with this one thing about which everybody does care. Her singing is characterized by good interpretation. We have hardly ever heard a singer who is so true to the thought Her singing is characterized by good interpretation. We have hardly ever heard a singer who is so true to the thought and feeling of a song. We hear a iot about "temperament" in music, which to some of us means wild-eyed looks or woe-begone, love-sick "touches"—and "temperament," the initiated say, has to do with feeling. But we are talking about the sort of feeling that moves people's sympathies. This Miss Masson has. Every thought is compassed; every word is clear and true, and comes to the audience with an effect that can hardly be told. To be sure, Miss Masson has remarkable truth and beauty of tone, but the effect that her singing products is from her interpretation plus these. Her training has not been the usual musical training, divorced from every-

Her training has not been the usual musical training, divorced from everything save technique. As is generally the case, we do not get something for nothing, so we find here, that Miss Masson has had good and faithful training of mind and emotional nature; and this, too, long before she ever sang a note with the view of singing as a profession. Her musical education began in her earliest childhood, and has grown hand in hand with her mental development as such. She says herself, the result is 'hat she studies a song, as an actor does a play, with her audience before her. She lays open before them its most delicate or its most terrible meaning, and the tones of her voice take care of themselves. Each day she practices exercises for technique per se, but never exercises for technique per se, but never when singing a song. The only require-exercises for technique per se, but never when singing a song. The only requirement made then is truth of thought, and truth of tone follows.

Miss Masson's whole musical training vocally, has been under the skillful hand of Albert Baker Cheney. She sang last week before the Cantabrigia club, and last Tuesday before the New England Woman's Press club at its gentlemen's sight, at the Vendome, and she has illustrated with songs, several Shakespearian recitals of Mrs. E. Charlton Black.

QUAIL FROM EGYPT.

Something entirely new for addition to the zoology of the Sportsman's show came over on the steamer Cestrian which Something entirely new for addition the zoology of the Sportsman's show came over on the steamer Cestrian which arrived in Boston last week Wednesday. The something is a covey of quall from Egypt. They were captured soon after the arrival of the millions of migrating quail that seek Egypt and other Mediterranean countries when the winter weather in other climes drives them out. The Egyptians belong to the family of true quails, and true quails, unlike our bob-white, migrate when the season in one place becomes unsuited to their taste. These little Egyptians always select the time of a high wind for their long journeyings, as, like the quail of New England, they are short-winged birds, and need the help of a strong breeze to push them along.

On the same ship there also arrived several fine specimens of the German roe deer. All of the animals were in good condition, the quail especially being unruffled in feather, bright eyed and alert. These quail will serve to round out a splendid exhibit of game birds. The several new species from foreign lands will afford sportsmen who are interested in re-peopling the depleted covers of New England with birds an opportunity to study the bob-white, the mountain quall of California, the Hungarian partridge, the red-legged partridge of France, our own ruffed grouse, three or four kinds of pheasants, the black cock, and the Egyptians at close quarters.

The exhibition will open on Washington's birthday. Arrangements have been made for a profuse program of aquatic events and in addition there will be a laughable pantomime.

Monday—Housekeepers' Day.

To the Young Housekeeper.

To the most interesting creature in the world-the girl who has become the wife -who has taken upon her slender shoulders the exacting responsibilities of womanhood-we desire to say these few words:-

Economy is the price of happiness. Upon your wisdom, upon your discretion, upon your judgment, upon your frugality will the success of your little home depend. Everything else being equal, the girl who is a prudent purchaser is bound to bring her husband in a winner when life's race is ended. This you should remember.

Your husband has $14 a week, say 16, say 20, or perhaps 25 or even more! What doth it avail how much he receives for his toil, if his young partner in life is neither careful nor wise in buying the household necessaries? There's many a home in Cambridge today where 25 a week is doing no more than 15 is doing in many another. And why? Simply and solely because there is both waste and extravagance in the purchasing departments of those little homes. That's all; that's the explanation.

A penny saved is a penny earned. That is also true of the dimes and of the DOE WINS.

that Mr. Spurr will carry the contest for selectman to the polls by running on nomination papers, and the same may be true of Mr. Sears for treasurer and collector and Mr. Allen for town clerk, although the latter is deemed more unlikely.

The caucus was called to order shortly past 8 o'clock by Edwin S. Farmer.

The caucus was called to order shortly past 8 o'clock, by Edwin S. Farmer, chairman of the board of selectmen, who read the call and asked for nomination for permanent chairman. For this position Warren W. Rawson was nominated but before he was elected he was opposed by William H. Nolan, who protested against Mr. Rawson being the choice on the grounds that he was soon to appear before the court on a charge of violating the town by-laws by keeping a larger number of pigs than the by-laws allow. Mr. Nolan attempted to continue his opposition by speaking along these lines, but was ruled out of order by the chairman pro tem. Mr. Rawson was then elected by acclamation. S. B. Wood was chosen secretary. The tellers appointed were E. L. Churchill, J. Mahoney, L. D. Bradley, J. G. Pattee and Myron Taylor.

A motion was quickly offered asking the nomination of George I. Doe for selectment by acclamation.

A motion was quickly offered asking the nomination of George I. Doe for selectman by acclamation, but this was voted down, and on motion of R. Walter Hilliard, a vote was taken. It was some time before the result was announced, and in the meantime the nominations for several offices were made by acclamation. As the list of candidates stood at the close of the caucus, these nominations were chronicled: Selectman, George I. Doe; town clerk, Harvey S. Sears; treasurer and collector, George G. Alien; assessor for three years, Edwin Mills; tree warden, Warren A. Peirce; commissioner of sewers for three years, W. S. Durgin; commissioner of sinking fund for three years, William G. Peck; trustee of cemetery, soldiers' monument and Robbins' fund, Warren A. Peirce; auditors, Alfred T. Marston and James R. Mann; park commissioner for three years, James A. Balley, Jr.; school committee, three years, Miss Ida F. Robbins, John H. Perry and Mrs. Hattie F. Hornblower; two years, Harry G. Porter; water commissioner for three years, Peter Schwamb; trustees Robbins library, Rev, S. C. Bushnell and Dr. Charles A. Keegan for three years and Arthur J. Wellington for two years; trustee Pratt fund for five years, William E. Wood; Constables, Alonzo S. Harriman, John Duffy, Daniel M. Hooley, Garrett Barry, Charles Woods; moderator, Walter A. Robinson.

The caucus nominations made but few The caucus nominations made but few changes in the present list of town officers. Outside of the proposed change in the office of treasurer and collector, Dr. Charles A. Keegan is nominated in place of Matthew Rowe for trustee of the Robbins library, as the latter declined to again be a candidate. James A. Balley, Jr., who stands for park commissioner, will take the place of S. Frederick Hicks if elected. Mr. Hicks would not run again.

During the caucus there was an attempt to nominate Harvey S. Sears for treasurer and collector by acclamation, but the friends of Mr. Allen were too strong. William E. Wood presented the name of Mr. Allen, saving that the father and grandfather of his candidate had served in that capacity, and he thought it well and fitting that Mr. Allen be the nominee. T. Ralph Parris who had been mentioned as a candidate for the office of town cierk, stated to the caucus that he was not and had not for the office of town clerk, stated to the caucus that he was not and had not been a candidate.

The talk on the streets and elsewhere, since the caucus, has been to the effect that the contest for selectman would be carried to the polls, and much speculation has arisen as to who will be the winner. It is asserted by the friends of Mr. Spurr that his candidacy was handicapped from the fact that his name was not presented openly before the caucus and that if it had been he could have won out. This is explained, however, on the grounds that it was believed the anti-Doe forces were strong enough to win without a show of hands, but that was proven false. The fact that Mr. Spurr was not recognized as a candidate before the caucus by those on the outside is taken to show that he will prove a formidable candidate at the polls, and on the other hand, it is as confidently assumed that if Mr. Doe could win the nomination in the face of a caucus which was apparently packed against him, he can win by a handsome margin election day. The coming week promises to be a lively one in the history of Arlington politics.

The work of the Boston Elevated Rail-The work of the Boston Elevated Railway company in the big snow storm just ended, and the results the company accomplished, are striking illustrations of its thorough organization and the energy with which its work is carried out.

While many other roads were tied up by the heavy and wet fall of snow, the Boston company did not lose a single foot of track; its cars carried the public safely home a little less greedily than on safely home a little less greedily than or safely home, a little less speedily than on the previous day, but just as surely. The elevated lines also proved to be perfect ly successful in running without fall through the storm and after the storm.

it is generally understood that the system which resulted in these excellent results is the work of the president of the road, Gen. William A. Bancroft. His skill as an organizer is well known, and it was never better illustrated than in the handling during emergencies of the complex system of cars running in and out of Boston. Not once since he took charge of the road has it failed of thorough success in meeting the needs of the public in any and all crucial occa-sions like that of this week. THE SNOW AND THE ELEVATED SERVICE.

After passing through two nearly snowless winters, the Elevated Rallway company has again demonstrated the perfection of its organization and equipment for snow fighting. Many of the street rallways within the territory covered by the storm were more or less seriously tied up, but the local system, both surface and elevated, was kept open to traffic without interruption. One can to traffic without interruption. One can appreciate that the results that have been achieved are by no means accidental, nor could the success have been as complete as it has been had not a highcomplete as it has been had not a high-ly perfected organization been carefully devised in advance. In fact, it may be said that the question of supremacy be tween the storm and the railway is com-monly settled before the first flake of snow falls. The readiness and ease with which the elevated road throws out its ploughs, men and teams in sufficient numbers, and at the right points upon the surface lines, are evidence of the careful forethought of the management, and the military-like organization among and the military-like organization among its men. Indeed, the efficiency of the system springs largely from the military training and instincts of its president; its forces are handled and its efforts are directed much as are those of an army in the field.

Another fact which the storm established is, that the elevated lines and the hished is, that the elevated lines and the service upon them are not likely to be interfered with by a snow storm, even though it be wet and heavy. Thus the great volume of traffic is taken from the surface of the streets which become blocked with teams that are forced upon the railway track by the presence of deep snow upon either side of the street. As a result of the elevated service, suburban passengers were brought in town for the first time after a heavy snow storm with the same speed and certainty as though there had been no storm. Both the public and the road are to be congratulated upon the efficiency of the system and its management under severely trying conditions. [Boston Herverely trying conditions.
